U.S. Patent and Trademark Office PTOL-413B (04-03) Continuation of Substance of Interview including description of the general nature of what was discussed: It was suggested that the claims should be amended to indicate that a color is initially not present (as taught by Tanner et al). Further, it was pointed out by Mr. Gould that the dyes of the instant application are aversive agents and actually stain the abuser. Neither of these features is taught by the cited prior art. If the claims can be amended to show that the composition itself differs according to these limitations, and not just in functional language, the amendment would overcome the rejection under 35 USC 103(a).
